American Studies Minor

The minor in American Studies is designed to help students write and communicate more clearly, especially those students in large social science and science programs. It will also encourage students to take advantage of one of largest and most diverse course curricula available anywhere in the world as well as learn to think deeply about issues and commitments arising from their work in their major programs in light of the specific American contexts of culture, politics, policy, forms of media, and so on. A minor in American Studies will culminate with a "capstone" project to be completed in a seminar course taught by AS affiliated faculty, where students will research and write (and in some cases, web publish or present in public venues) in-depth "features" aimed at communicating ideas and scholarship to a wide audience.

Hidden in Plain Sight: Public History in Public Space AC Summer Course

HUM 133AC (#15475) / ENV DES 133AC (#15421) / AMERSTD 110AC (#15485)
Summer Session C, June 21-Aug. 12, 3 units, Lecture Course

Course Opportunities: Week of April 18th, 2022

MWF 10 am -12 pm, in-person

Instructor: Catherine Covey

Fulfills the elective requirement for the Certificate in Urban Humanities and the American Cultures Requirement

Hidden in Plain Sight will explore the ways history can be illuminated or erased through urban design, museums and monuments, archives, historic preservation, heritage tourism, media, oral history, and cultural resource management. We'll explore challenges surrounding the presentation and preservation of public spaces and histories in the U.S. context. We'll examine landscapes that have been shaped by economic inequality, migration, mass incarceration, racism, and larger conditions of societal and planetary change. We will analyze what is hidden, forgotten, missing, or in need of representation. Assignments will include devising imaginative ways to tell little-known histories of the UC Berkeley campus.

Future Histories Lab offers community-engaged, project-based courses. Dig into hidden local histories and envision better futures in our exciting courses focused on social justice, race, place, and the arts. Take just three courses (in summer or other times) and earn a Certificate in Urban Humanities.

The Global Urban Humanities Initiative is an interdisciplinary program that studies cities through the lenses of the arts and humanities, architecture, and city planning. Undergraduate and graduate students can earn a Certificate in Global Urban Humanities. Information at globalurbanhumanities.berkeley.edu.

Berkeley Certificate in Design Innovation

The Berkeley Certificate in Design Innovation (BCDI) assumes that innovation does not come from just one area of study, but requires the integration of many modes of technology, knowledge, and thought. The cross-disciplinary, cross-departmental partnership between the College of Environmental Design, the College of Engineering, the Haas School of Business, and the College of Letters and Sciences Arts and Humanities Division hopes to guide undergraduate students across UC Berkeley's campus to the critical need for design thinking.

Course Opportunities: Week of April 18th, 2022

For more information about BCDI, please visit our website at <http://bcdi.berkeley.edu> and/or email the BCDI Student Services Advisor, Tyshon Rogers with any questions at trogers@berkeley.edu.

HISTORY 100S - Session D

M,T,W,R 1pm-2:59pm

Together we will study the history of medicine via ten objects central to its modern and contemporary practice. By looking at the ordinary, habitual objects that many of us have used and been subject to (from the thermometer and X-Ray to the vaccine), we will trace the practice of medicine, advancements in science, the politics of care, and patient's perspective, with a focus on the 20th and 21st Century. Students will collaborate to make an encyclopedia of medical objects, which we will co-edit and collate and launch as a digital archive.

Instructor bio: Hannah Zeavin is a Lecturer in the Department of English at UC Berkeley, affiliated with the University of California at Berkeley Center for Science, Technology, Medicine, and Society. She received her Ph.D. from the Department of Media, Culture, and Communication at NYU in 2018. She works as a media historian with particular expertise in the intertwined histories of communication, technology, and medicine. Her new book, The Distance Cure: A History of Teletherapy, is a transnational social history of mediated therapies from Freud's letters to apps for smartphones.

"Introduction to Principles of Professional Communication" - COLWRIT 151

We are offering COLWRIT 151 "Introduction to Principles of Professional Communication" in Session D. This course would be of interest to any student considering a career in business, or any professional field, who wants to improve their writing skills for such an environment.

The class number is 15371.

Introducing participants to key principles and rhetorical strategies of writing texts in nonacademic settings, this course focuses on learning and practicing strategies for generating some of the most common types of documents that circulate within the workplace. For more information, visit <<http://collegewriting151.weebly.com/>>. In summer offerings of the course, the client project that students complete on campus during the academic year will be replaced with Professional Communication Micro-Lessons that students generate on topics of their choice. Course materials will be available through bCourses; there is no textbook.

REQUIREMENTS:

Fulfillment of both halves (Parts A and B) of the Reading & Composition Requirement and junior or senior status, or consent of instructor. The course assumes comparable competencies in students who enroll in the course during the summer.

"Issues in Teaching English Internationally" - COLWRIT 121

This course in Session A would be of interest to anyone wanting to pursue a career teaching English outside of the country:

COL WRIT - 121 "Issues in Teaching English Internationally"
Class Number 14975

This course offers students an opportunity to consider relevant academic and professional issues related to the teaching of English internationally. Through readings, discussions, and assigned projects, students learn about principles of language policy and planning, linguistics, methodology, and assessment. These topics contribute to students' understanding of the theoretical and practical aspects of effective English language teaching abroad, leading to responsible engagement in the international community of English language teachers and learners.
