Fall 2020: Berkeley Connect

Berkeley Connect is open to all students at UC Berkeley, it is a one-unit course, taken Pass/Not Pass (course number 98BC for freshmen and sophomores, 198BC for juniors and seniors). It is offered Fall and Spring through 15 different academic departments on campus, but you don't need to be a declared or intended major in one of those departments in order to enroll. When you sign up through a department that aligns with your academic interests, you will be assigned a graduate student from that department who will serve as your personal mentor for the semester. At the same time, you'll be placed in a group with 19 other students who share your interest in that subject. Over the course of the semester, you'll meet with your mentor for one-on-one conversations about anything you want to talk about related to your academic life, and you'll meet with your small group for discussions facilitated by your mentor about the academic discipline and about life at a research university. You'll also participate in special events organized just for Berkeley Connect students, featuring professors and alumni as guest speakers. Berkeley Connect assigns no homework, reading, tests or papers--it does not add to your workload, but rather gives you an opportunity to build community here at UC Berkeley so you can make the most of your time here.

Students consistently report that participating in Berkeley Connect increases their sense of belonging at UC Berkeley and their confidence they can succeed here. During the Spring 2020 semester, Berkeley Connect successfully operated as a remote program during the campus closure. In the event that any part of the 2020-21 academic year must be virtual rather than in-person, Berkeley Connect will provide you with a great opportunity to meet and interact with your fellow students and start building your personal network.

If you have any questions about Berkeley Connect, please feel free to contact the program office at berkeleyconnect@berkeley.edu.

LDARCH 12: Environmental Science for Sustainable Development

CCN: 20704 (4 units)

Lecture TU,TH 12:30 pm - 1:59 pm (lecture online and two lab sections in person*)

This course introduces you to the interdisciplinary field of environmental science as a basis for sustainable development, planning, and design. The course combines lectures that provide a broad overview of the discipline with lab/discussion sections to give students experiential understanding of environmental issues such as stream hydrology and ecology, air pollution, biogeochemical cycling, as well as strategies for sustainability, such as urban agriculture and energy efficiency in buildings.

*Important clarification on "in-person" lab sections

The course can be taken entirely remotely. See detailed information from Prof. Kondolf below. The department is working on getting this reflected in the class schedule. Until then, please refer to the following.

"Please be sure you are registering for the appropriate lab section based on whether you will be living around campus and wanting to participate in some outside meetings or whether you will be living elsewhere and would like to take the class entirely remotely.

Lectures will be remote only. Lectures will be streamed during lecture time, in some cases presented live, in other cases pre-recorded (often with live Q&A). Recorded lectures will be available online a few hours after the lecture time or sooner. In lieu of a midterm and high-stakes final, we will have bi-weekly tests during lecture time. We are now working on options to offer the bi-weekly tests at an alternative time that is offset to be more convenient to students in Asia and Europe.

Lab Sections 103 & 105 will be in-person, outside only (ie. no meetings indoors). Demonstrations only (no touching equipment), for the first half of the semester only. After that, all classes will be remote.

All other sections, as well as the lectures, are remote only. The remote lab sections feature video demonstrations of the instructor or GSI making measurements/observations, with the data provided to the class, so similar to the in person labs, but just by video instead of in person. Sec 101 will be offered late night Berkeley time for the convenience of students enrolled in Asia or Europe.

Escape Artists
in Jewish Popular Culture and Literature

This class explores the art of escape, and the determining role Jewish artists played in its conception and history. Throughout the semester, we will contemplate the social meaning of escapology and its representations in art. We will also discuss the historical circumstances that drove Jewish artists to take part in performative bondage that ties together magic, stunt work, mass entertainment, and anti-fascist sensibilities. By the semester’s end, we will also reflect on the afterlife of escape art, and the ways the creators are remembered in contemporary social consciousness. These endeavors will mostly focus on the life and works of four Jewish artists who performed, wrote, and illustrated the art of escapology: Harry Houdini, Franz Kafka, Jack Kirby, and Michael Chabon. In this exploration, we will see how the trope of escapology allows the creators to challenge social constraints and elude them. As such, this class offers an uncommon insight into 20-century Jewish culture, and the multiple responses Jews had to religious tradition, anti-Semitism, racism, masculinity, gender, and body politics. This class requires no prior knowledge in either Jewish studies or escape art and is open to everybody.

Fall 2020: Democracy in Crisis Course

Democracy is challenged from every direction today--by the recent rise of neo-fascist popular movements and authoritarian heads of state, and by plutocracy, corruption, and transnational powers such as finance and social media in the making for decades. At the same time, the climate crisis and the explosion of racial and gender justice movements have thrown new demands at democratic principles and practices.

Together these challenges animate "Democracy in Crisis," a new 1-credit course in the College Letters & Science offered online in Fall 2020. Co-taught by Michael Watts, a geographer specializing in political economy and Africa; James Vernon, a historian of modern and contemporary Britain; and Wendy Brown, a political theorist of American political culture and its predicaments, the course centers on short weekly readings and interviews with activists and scholars from around the globe.

The course is open to all undergraduate students and welcomes auditors from the alumni community.

Fall 2020: Global Poverty & Practice Minor

The GPP Minor introduces students to the theoretical frameworks, methods, and practical skills necessary to engage with global poverty and inequality in effective ways.

The minor requires five courses and a "Practice Experience." This experience is a central component of the minor in which students partner with domestic or international non-governmental or community organizations, government agencies, or other poverty or development programs, on various dimensions of poverty action – from food security and sustainable technologies to economic justice and grass-roots political power. The combination of the coursework for the minor and this real world experience allows students to connect theories and practices of poverty action. Funding is available to support students’ practice experiences.

The deadline to declare the minor this semester is Wednesday, October 14th. There are no prerequisites required to declare.

The Declaration Form and additional information about the minor can be found at:
http://blumcenter.berkeley.edu/gppminor.

Information Sessions about the minor will be held on Zoom at the following times (Zoom sessions linked):
Course Opportunities: Week of September 14, 2020

In this course, we will study major tech industry controversies and heavily criticized tech products, policies, and effects, including technologies used at the U.S.-Mexico border, social media platforms’ spread of disinformation and fake news, racial bias in algorithms, and internet trolling and harassment. We will also examine tech companies’ long-running tendency to exclude women and non-Asian minorities, and how tech workers have occasionally come under fire for the industry’s harms. Students will be required to brainstorm and design their own interventions into the workings of the tech sector to make it more inclusive, equitable, and diverse.

This course fulfills the American Cultures requirement, the Electrical Engineering and Computer Science Ethics requirement, and the Media Studies Requirement Group B: Specialization in a Medium.

Fall 2020: Native American Studies Courses
